Excerpt: . . . punish the offenders, was fearfully summary. Tbr whole of the ChapelgorrU were this morning marched a few miles on tbe Miranda road, and, without being in the slightest degree aware of what was in preparation, were ordered to ascend a rising ground, --the same where the French batteries were planted which did so much execution during the advance upon Villora by Lord Wellingtons army. Here they found a body of OOO infantry, the bone artillery which had preceded them from Vittoria, and a considerable number of cavalry, already drawn up. Having completed thr ascent, they were halted, and ordered to pile their arms, from which they were commanded to move some distance. The cavalry now rod up between the Cbapelgorri and their muitkpu, orming a guard to the latter. Then, bir the first time, the poor fellows began to form a suspicion of what was intended against them, aud several moved u if to repossess thenuelres of their arms; but the cavalry drove them back, and they were left helpleu. Espartero who commanded in periou at this scene, now ordered that lots ihould be cast for decimation The command was obeyed, and the untartnate stood apart from their aitonithed am indignant comrades. The first ten of this devoted number were again selected, and these were inevitably to die. Among them was a fine young man, a Frenchman; and, as bis llimrades assert, a nephew of Lalitte. This youth, scarcely nineteen, was an object of...
