CLASSICAL ARCHITECTURE. / DEGREESUR last section was on the military metaphors of St Paul, with especial reference to the middle portion of the sixth chapter of the Epistle to the Ephesians. The present will deal with the architectural metaphors of the same Apostle, with prominent but not by any means exclusive reference to a passage in the third chapter of the Second Epistle to the Corinthians. The thought which lies at the basis of these essays is this: that in order to understand an ancient writer it is not enough to study his books, but necessary also to know something of the fashion of his times, --not safe simply to work from the Dictionary, without some regard to the records of Monumental History, --without some effort to reproduce and realise manners and customs, and the outward expression of the old social life...
